It's seven forty-five on Saturday and I was up until two. Why am I at work again? Where's my coffee?

(It was gorgeous, wasn't it? He turned, and I thought I was totally busted, and then--man, he's really spectacular, in a heron-hunting frogs kind of way, when he whips that neck around.)

I would say "what do you mean, 'us'?" but the look of wonder on your face just now was too perfect.

I boiled them and par-baked them last night. We'll see if finishing them off this morning actually results in delicious fresh-baked bagels, or if I've ruined them. (My test bagel, yesterday, came out awesome. So I have hopes.)

And besides, you were just so darned cute last night. I can deny you nothing. (I think the Cowboy suffered some sort of critical damage to his sexual self-image, though. You were that convincing.)

That's awesome. (And here I thought only boys like me played around like that.)

I don't think I've ever seen a girl pull off the drag king thing in person, except the ones who were living it. (Though, come to think of it, I've got a couple female friends who could probably pull it off -- but they're skinny and Asian and thus halfway to androgyny anyway. mutters something about getting them fed regularly, put some meat on those bones, if we turned you sideways we'd lose you)

Too many of my female acquaintances seem to think that boy-drag can be achieved by wearing baggy, boring clothes in neutral colors, or a second-hand suit or something. I've never been convinced. Props to you, trollcatz, for pulling it off -- wish I could've seen it!

(To be fair, lots of guys seem to think that girl-drag can be achieved by wearing an ill-fitting dress, a long wig, and lipstick, so perhaps I shouldn't judge /too/ harshly.)

(Now if only I could figure out what to do for myself to go the other way... I'm halfway there just by the fact of having long hair, and I'm told I look cute in a skirt, but I shave my goatee and my chin just disappears and I look way too milquetoast, and I'd have to do something to tame the eyebrows...)

By the way--- trollcatz, how'd you do the slicked ponytail?

I've known a number of butch women (they'd object strenuously to being called "girls") who ID as women, who don't intentionally dress "as men" most of the time, but who pass beautifully when they want to. And some of them have been quite well-endowed, too. There are all kind of tricks for dealing with a curvy frame.
